THE UN SECURITY COUNCIL WILL MEET URGENTLY ON MARCH 7, TO DISCUSS HEALTH CRISIS

OVER UKRAINE/RUSSIA CONFLICT

Paris, Washington DC, 07.03.2022, 01:28 Time

USPA NEWS - The UN Security Council will meet urgently on Monday March 7, once again since the beginning of the armed conflict (February 24, 22) in Ukraine, at the request of the USA and Albania, to discuss the health crisis following the Russia's invasion of Ukraine. On the same day, a new negotiations between Ukraine and Russia will also take place in the for the third round of talks, on the Belarusian border (Gomel).
NATO refused to establish a no-fly zone in Ukraine to prevent Russian bombing. Indeed, the Russian President, Putin, explained that any country allowing this No Fly Zone would make him a "co belligerent", including NATO. Ukrainian President Zelensky then reacted immediately, via social networks, denouncing NATO's decision, which he considers a form of "self-hypnosis" of the members of the Alliance. (Source, US. Department of State, United Nations). The United States and Albania had, previously, called for a UN Security Council vote on Friday, February 25, 2022 at 8:00 p.m. GMT on a draft resolution strongly condemning the invasion of Ukraine and calling for the immediate withdrawal of Russian troops. (The day after the Russian attack of 24th February 2022)

The United States and Albania had, previously, called for a UN Security Council vote on Friday, February 25, 2022 at 8:00 p.m. GMT on a draft resolution strongly condemning the invasion of Ukraine and calling for the immediate withdrawal of Russian troops. (The day after the Russian attack of 24th February 2022). The draft, placed under Chapter 7 of the United Nations Charter, which allows the use of force to enforce it, is doomed to failure because of the right of veto that Russia has in the Security Council as a permanent member. , according to diplomats.----------
According to the draft text, the Council would condemn "in the strongest terms Russia's aggression against Ukraine", pointing out that it violates Article 2(4) of the UN Charter. This paragraph states that "all members shall refrain in their international relations from the use of threat or force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any State".
